The Harvard School of Dental Medicine AAWD student chapter in collaboration with the Office of Development and Alumni Relations and Office of Diversity and Inclusion hosted a virtual talk on “Racial Disparities and Inequities in Dentistry” on July 29, 2020. The talk featured Teresa Perkins DMD '81 and Anubha Sacheti DMD '04, two incredible female dental professionals and HSDM alumnae.

Our audience learned about racial disparities and inequities in dentistry as well as about the personal experiences of our speakers. Dr. Perkins gave a great historical background and touched on specific disparities and inequities in dentistry. Dr. Sacheti followed with her personal story of overcoming struggles with expanding her pediatric practice. At the end of the panel, students ranging from 1st to 4th year asked questions and shared their thoughts. This led to a greater discussion on how providers can take small steps every day to combat inequities to contribute to larger scale solutions.

This was a successful virtual event for our HSDM AAWD student chapter with record turnout which reflected the importance of this topic. Next, our chapter plans to host similar events to interact with our community and explore more topics in dentistry from female perspectives.

Dr. Rashid Assistant Clinical Professor University of New England College of Dental Medicine presented was a guest speaker at the “Intercontinental Summit on Aging & Gerontology Virtual Conference.”

The conference focused on social additives and implications of aging, cellular & molecular repair of age-associated harm as the premise of treatment options to deliver aging under control. The purpose of the conference was to recognize age-associated diseases and disabilities and to suggest new insights.

Her talk titled “Oral health and Aging Population: How to retain Dental Prosthesis Longer” discussed the age-related impact on oral health, dental needs of elderly, disease prevention to improve the quality of life for older adults.
